On July 30, 2014, the following communication was sent to CME Group Inc. employees:

To Our Colleagues,

Today we are pleased to announce a significant step forward in our European growth strategy through an agreement to acquire Trayport and FENICS from GFI Group.

Trayport is a leading provider of trading software in the European energy markets. It is used by brokers, exchanges and trading counterparties, and a significant amount of European natural gas, power and coal trading activity takes place using Trayport software. Right now, European energy markets are de-regulating and the regional demand for risk management in this sector is especially high. By acquiring this well-established business that already has a strong client base, we will expand our involvement in European energy markets at the same time we increase operational efficiencies and trading opportunities for market participants. Overall, Trayport gives us a number of opportunities to expand our global footprint, including facilitating and servicing Asian energy markets as they emerge.

FENICS provides best-in-class price discovery, analytics, risk management and OTC workflow connectivity services for global FX options markets. The acquisition of FENICS helps to extend our infrastructure investment in Europe and Asia following the launch of FX futures and options on CME Europe earlier this year. FENICS has an extensive sell-side client base, particularly in Europe and Asia, that will further complement our buy-side focused FX product distribution and round out CME Group's participation in the broader FX ecosystem. As market users prepare for the pending OTC FX options clearing mandates in various regulatory jurisdictions, the connectivity of CME Group and FENICS will provide a conduit for OTC clients to access CME Group's OTC clearing and exchange traded options.

Our announcement today explains that we intend to purchase these businesses, subject to regulatory and GFI shareholder approval, by first acquiring all of the outstanding shares of GFI and immediately selling GFI's inter-dealer broker business to a private consortium made up of its current management, while maintaining Trayport and FENICS as wholly-owned subsidiaries. We expect the transaction to close in early 2015. Additional information is available in our press release.

The focus of and impetus for this deal is growth, not expense synergies. We always have maintained that we will pursue growth opportunities that deliver strategic value to our businesses and complement our competitive position. These acquisitions do both, and we would like to thank the groups across the company that identified this opportunity to bolster our European and global Energy and FX business strategies and helped us prepare for today's announcement.

Sincerely,
Terry and Gill
