(music first 13 minutes)

Bryan            Okay. .... Alright. Good morning everybody. If I could ask folks not to hover around the walls. We feel unwanted up here. So let's come a little closer together if we may. (movement) That's much better. Much better. Thank you. ....

14:05            Alright. I'll try to speak up, but thank you all for coming this morning. And as Craig is in New York and uh, Gil is traveling in Asia today. So they're apologies that they can't be here this morning. But it was critical for us to be able to communicate with you about our news this morning. And so I wanted to spend some time with you and I'll try to be as thoughtful and considerate of your time to brief you on our definitive agreement to acquire NYMEX

Gil explained and Craig explained the wide range of benefits of this deal and what it means to our organization. And just to reiterate what it means to our fine organization, we're going to be bringing together the largest in terms of the interest rate in agricultural exchange with the energies markets. And we've been working at this for some time now in terms of facilitating a partnership between ourselves and the NYMEX group.

This was the beginning of a relationship that has spanned for several years. As we started with our agreement with them to list their products on Globex back in 2006, but we really started some relationship building some time back in the early 90's with the work on Clearing 21 as well as some introduction of E-mini products back in 2002. So we think that this is a natural extension of that relationship and really formulating that partnership going forward.

Now to us as employees, it gives us a new, exciting opportunity, which all of you have proven to be extremely formidable at in terms of bringing these companies together. We've done a very fine job in terms of the integration between the Chicago Board of Trade and the CME Group, and we think that by adding this to our footprint it's going to open up all new opportunities for this business. And what I mean by that is it's going to allow us to grow in the context of new products, growth in the OTC business, and extend our overall global reach. There's challenging work ahead for all of us — that's without a doubt — and we're going to be continuing to depend upon each and every one of you for your drive, your innovation, your talent, and your ambition to see us through this initiative.

Now, I know that a lot of you have some questions today with respects to the future and what that future means. And as with most mergers and acquisitions, there's questions with respect to jobs. And we don't have any decisions that we can share with you today, as I hope that you can appreciate, with the [recentcy] of the announcement this morning. We don't know what individual jobs will be maintained or eliminated or subject to transition in this combined company until the deal actually closes. But what we do know, and what we want to make sure people bear in mind is that we're going to need tremendous effort and tremendous talent to maintain the NYMEX markets. Their trading floor will remain in New York. We're going to continue to build on the NYMEX energy and metals products, cross sell them with our own products; we need to sell a whole new range of new customers and to grow this combined company around the world. As soon as we know more, we will be sharing more with you regarding the staffing process as we move forward. But just like the last time, we should expect and you should know that there's legal restrictions that may limit what we can and cannot say and do for some time.

Now today we announced this deal, but there's a long road ahead of us to complete this acquisition as we work to secure our regulatory approval, our shareholder approval, and we meet the necessary closing conditions to make this all happen. So I'm asking for, and on behalf of the entire management team, we're asking for your patience throughout this process and we promise to share as much information as we can with you as soon as we can. We'll continue to maintain our "just ask" site, which was very beneficial to all of us in the combination between the CBOT and CME. We would ask you to submit your questions, and also to share your feedback on this process as we go forward.

Now last but not least, we'd be very remiss not to acknowledge the hard work that each and every one of you have already done to bring us to where we are today with the CME and the CBOT integration and those important integration milestones that we're yet to deliver. We know that you've put in long hard hours to deliver these initiatives and we want you to know how much we appreciate your extraordinary efforts. You have demonstrated just how well we can come together as a combined organization to complete a major large scale initiative on behalf of all of our customers, our shareholders, your commitment and your high quality of execution bodes extremely well for our combination with NYMEX.

Now like the CME/CBOT merger, our combination with NYMEX will demand a lot from people such as yourselves across this entire organization. But we also cannot lose sight of our responsibility to be maintaining the core growth of the CME Group's existing business. What we mean by that is we have a lot on our agenda in addition to this that we have to continue to execute and be focused on going forward. You're going to be relied upon to do that.

We know that your plates are very full, and we're asking you to see us through yet another major defining year for our company. It's very exciting. Time and time again, you have risen to that occasion. We know that; we appreciate it; and we know you'll do so again.
