"Just Ask" Updates for Dec. 8, 2006

Thank you for submitting your questions to the "Just Ask" site on OpenExchange. Below we have provided answers to the most frequently asked questions we have received in the past week.

1. What happens to the CME trading floors after we move floor operations to CBOT?

The trading floors are not owned by CME; CME leases the trading floor space from the CME Trust. CME Trust is evaluating a number of real estate options at this point, and no decisions have been made at this time.

2. How are we keeping our customers informed of the progress of our merger?

CME believes this merger is very beneficial for customers. We are committed to keeping all stakeholders apprised of the progress of the merger, such as through press releases, filings and other communications. We will be working to solicit feedback from our customers at all points of the integration – both informally and through formal Industry Councils composed of key stakeholders.

It is also important to remember that, until the transaction closes, CME and CBOT are two separate companies who will communicate with their customers independently of each other. If you have questions about what you should or should not communicate to customers, please contact the Legal Department at 930-3305 or the Communications Department at 466-4613.
